Historical Series To Be Printed In Sentinel

Each inhabitant of Woodhull may anticipate living again, in fancy, many scenes of the early days in his own community. That being the case, each of you will have an especial interest in a series of historical articles to begin in the next issue of the Woodhull Sentinel.

Woodhull, like every other community, has its own beloved traditions handed down from father to son, familiar though more or less vague to most of us. The Woodhull Sentinel plans to record for you these intimate and live experiences in a form you may always have. These articles will appear from week to week, and by preserving the issues of the Sentinel our readers will have the printed record for which they may have wished.

Although this village is comparatively young in years, not one of its pioneer settlers is now living, and of those who took an active part in the early settlement of the community, few are here to record its happenings. Many are the familiar landmarks and the stories told of them, but we must have these in a form which will enable us to keep them accurately for them to live. Our readers will realize the only method of preserving an accurate history of such communities as ours, is through newspaper files. It is the desire of the publishers of the Woodhull Sentinel to perserve for the future, the historical records of Woodhull and vicinity.

This they plan to do by getting in touch with those older residents of the village, who are accurately informed of the past by experience or close association. The material which these friends give us will be written in a way which will give you both information and pleasure, now and in the future. Thus we shall strive to record, before they are forgotten, the circumstances and events so dear to every local inhabitant of Woodhull. Look for the first of these articles in the next issue of the Sentinel—that of June 26th.

Woodhull Stars Visitors at Bath

Friday evening a number from the local chapter were entertained by the Bath O. E. S. R. W. Aimee P. Wehman, District Deputy Grand Matron, and S. R. W. Saron M. Husted Assistant Grand Lecturer for the Steuben district, made their official visitation to the Bath Chapter at that time. This was the officers' last visit to the nineteen chapters of Steuben County.

After a delightful banquet which was served at 6:30 the meeting was presided over by Carlena M. Empey, Worthy Matron.

Those accompanying Mr. Husted from Woodhull chapter were: Mrs. Saron Husted, Mr. and Mrs. Elwyn Ten Broeck, Mr. and Mrs. George Symonds, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Brotzman, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Williams, Mr. and Mrs. John Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Parke Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Brown, Mrs. Lee Miller and Mrs. Ernest Husted.

Young Men Get Bail Following Arrest

Another and concluding chapter was added to the burglary mysteries that recently infested this community, when Leon Frazier, Hugh Magee and Ward Williams were arrested last week. Frazier and Williams are out on $2,000 bail while Magee is still waiting for a bondsman. The L. E. Handy store has recovered about half of its lost property.

Leon Frazier of Woodhull and Hugh Magee of Tuscarora were arraigned before Justice of Peace C. C. Burrell of Canisteo Thursday afternoon, after the arrests made by Sheriffs Lee Rogers of Tuscarora and C. Neil Roach of Canisteo. The charge being burglary third degree. The two men are held for the Steuben County Grand Jury under bail of $2,000 each.

Ward Williams of Addison, R. D., was arrested as being suspected of implication in the same robberies as are Frazier and Magee. Upon failure to raise the amount of his bond, Magee is now held in the County Jail at Bath. It has been asserted by Williams that still others are involved in the thefts committed in the vicinities of Addison and Northern Pennsylvania.

Mystery has surrounded the series of burglaries in Addison and it is hoped that the arrest of these three men may prove the key to the solution. The Addison stores that suffered loss from the recent robberies were the L. E. Handy Hardware, the Chatfield Garage, L. L. Towner & Sons' Garage and the McKay roadside stand.

Much of the property has been identified by the prisoners and restored to its rightful owners, having been skillfully separated and concealed in the woods near Tuscarora. All theAddison merchants who suffered losses from these burglaries have had a part of their stolen goods returned to them.

W. C. Newcomb of Rathbone was in town Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Sterle Olin and sons were in Cameron Sunday.

Mrs. Dorothy Schoonover of Jasper was a business caller in town Saturday.

2 Cars Given Away $2,500 In Prizes And Commission Offered

Receipt Books to Be Given Out June 23rd—Everybody Will Win—Much Interest and Enthusiasm Being Shown as Opening Date Approaches—Campaign Will Last Six Weeks—New 1930 Chevrolet Sedan and Ford Tudor Among Prizes.

Monday will see the opening of one of the most stupendous and liberal prize distribution campaigns ever inaugurated by a weekly newspaper in this section. Around $2,500 will be distributed to the workers in this campaign, which will be in connection with a great circulation drive of the Addison Advertiser and Woodhull Sentinel.

A Square Deal to All

This campaign is no experiment nor is it a fly-by-night- undertaking. It is bona fide in every respect and everyone participating in it is assured of fair and accurate dealing by this newspaper and its personnel.

A dandy Chevrolet Sedan and Ford Tudor Sedan, both 1930 models, head the list of ten prizes. Great care has been exercised in selecting this wonderful prize list to be awarded to the workers in this campaign, the management naturally is proud of the list.

Every man or woman, old or young, boy or girl, who is interested in increasing their earnings during the next few weeks is invited to enter and compete for these prizes and cash awards.

It Costs Nothing to Enter

It costs nothing to compete for the prizes. All subscription blanks, sample copies of the paper, instructions, etc., will be furnished without charge. Each candidate will be given definite instructions as to best methods of proceeding and every possible co-operation will be extended by the paper and the campaign management throughout the race.

Under the rules, There Will Be No Losers, for all who take an active part are guaranteed either one of the valuable prizes or a cash reward based on their new subscription collections. By "active" we specially mean as defined in the rules published in this issue one who makes a cash collection report at least once a week during the life of the campaign.

Any One Can Take Part

Men and women, married or single, boy or girl, over 17, or under the written consent of their parents or guardian, who live in Addison, Woodhull, or surrounding territory, are eligible to take part and win one of the prizes. You do not even have to be a subscriber to enter. This paper is particularly anxious to interest actively, people of ambition and energy who are active in church, civic or social work in their respective communities. It is not necessary that they have experience in this kind of work, as we give full instructions as to the best and easiest way to secure subscriptions.

Read Double Page Ad.

Be sure and read the double page ad. on the inside of this paper. It will show the list of prizes, and gives all of the rules and regulations of the campaign.

Great Opportunity

Here is the opportunity that a number of friends and readers have been waiting for. Here is an opportunity to earn about $130.00 a week for the next six weeks. This is not a drawing offer. We do not want to attract the interest of those who hope to get something for nothing. This is a competition sales contest, in which all who take active part will be rewarded in exact proportion to the effort that they make, and in which the earnings of the leaders will be large.

Enter Your Name Today

Send in your nomination today. A blank appears elsewhere in this issue and when received at The Addison Advertiser office will bring to you full particulars and supplies. A request for information does not place you under obligation and we will be glad to give a personal explanation of the details at your home if not convenient to you to call at this office.

Free Votes

In this issue of the paper there will be printed free vote coupons good for 200 votes. These coupons may be clipped and turned in to the credit of anyone wishing to take part.

Everybody Wins

One of the most attractive features of this campaign is that Everybody Wins. There will be no losers—for all who take an active part according to rules of this campaign, are guaranteed one of the most attractive prizes or a generous commission. You pay yourself and write your own price tag. You cannot win without work, but you can win one of the prizes that will be given with only 10 per cent of the work that would be necessary to earn the money to buy it. The more who enter the more likely it will be for you to win one of the awards. Just a few short weeks to work and this paper will pay you a handsome dividend. One can rise to the occasion when properly enthused and sell something useful and needful to someone else. You can easily sell this paper to those who are not regular subscribers, try it and see.

The Advertiser and Sentinel in putting on this great circulation campaign, positively guarantee fair and impartial treatment to everyone who enters and takes an active part. This is easily the most liberal prize offering ever made by a newspaper in this part of New York, and it now rests with the enterprising people of this territory to get busy and secure a share of all the big prizes to be awarded. This is "Your Opportunity" to secure, without a single cent of cost to you, prizes which would take years of saving and denial to acquire. Here they are for you "Absolutely" for just a few weeks of your spare time. The wise candidate will send in his or her nomination coupon at once and be among the first in the field. Our friends will give their subscription to someone—YHY NOT YOU? The campaign headquarters will be located at The Addison Advertiser office. Write the manager for any information you may want to have about this interesting campaign and the same will be promptly furnished.

The Advisory Board

It is the sincere aim of this newspaper to conduct this campaign from start to finish in a fair, honorable and impartial manner. Every precaution has been taken to safeguard the interests of participants, and absolute honesty in all dealings is guaranteed. However, not all wisdom lies with any one man or institution ,and for that reason an Advisory Board will be selected to decide any question of sufficient moment that might happen to arise, and to act as judges and award the prizes. These men will be well-know to everyone in this vicinity, and the final results as given out by them, will be beyond dispute.

Announcement

All subscription receipt books, report sheets, subscription list and all necessary supplies will be given to the candidates in the subscription campaign at this office Monday morning, or will be mailed at your request. Be an early bird, for the early bird catches the worm and it will be the candidates who start early who will carry off the more valuable prizes. A good start is the battle half won. Get in it—stay in and win. You can't lose. First come, first served.

Management of Campaign

Mr. H. W. Robbins will manage the campaign. He comes to us highly recommended by many different publishers of newspapers where he has managed campaigns most successfully during the past few years. We feel sure you will find Mr. Robbins fair and honest and a man of his word. He will handle this campaign from start to finish. All business will be transacted through him and we advise you to get in touch with him immediately and let him explain more fully to you, the details of this wonderful offer.

It is our sincere aim to give the people of this section a weekly paper of such news and interest that they will be eager to have it come to their home and to be read by the whole family.

THE ADDISON BAND

The Addison Band which was organized about eighteen months ago, is rapidly growing in popularity. Saturday evening the band will give another concert on Valerio Parkway, while the organization has an engagement to play at Goodhue Lake on Sunday afternoon June 29

A FEW FACTS ABOUT OURSELVES

This a great country.

Uh-huh. We've heard that before. What about it?

Just this about it. Dr. Julius Klein, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, than whom there are few keener analysts in the world, has been figuring out how much better off we are than the rest of the world.

The United States has only 6 per cent of the world's population, but we consume 15 per cent of the world's wheat crop. That means that, if the rest of the world were able to buy and eat as much food as we do, the wheat crop would have to be two and one-half times as large as it is.

We consume nearly a quarter of all the world's sugar, more than half of the world's coffee, more than a quarter of the world's cotton, one-sixth of all the wool, three-quarters, nearly, of all the silk, two-thirds of all the rubber, about one-fifth of all the iron and copper, lead, zinc and coal. We use three-fifths of the world's petroleum, two-fifths of all the electric power, more than three-quarters of all the automobiles and three-fifths of all telephones.

And we number less than one-sixth of the world's population!

If the rest of the world was as well off as we are how prosperous we and all the rest would be. Our average family income is $3,000 a year. The British income is two-thirds of that, Canada's less than half, Sweden's still lower, Germany's only a little over one-third as large and France's about the same—personal income of the average man, that is. That's why we can, and do, consume more of the world's raw material than any other nation.

We have set an example to the rest of the world, which it is slowly beginning to follow, in spots. The farther and more rapidly it extends, the sooner and more surely will we reach the stage of human development in which people will no longer die of starvation, in which every human being will have his happiness in his own hands.

There are those who say that in seeking material prosperity humanity is losing its spiritual ideals. It does not seem that way to us. It is one thing to forego riches for the sake of the higher life; it is quite another thing to have no choice in the matter. Poverty in itself is not a virtue. It was a wise man who said that it was useless to preach idealism to a man who didn't know where his next day's dinner was coming from. And that is the condition of more than half of the people of the world today, while a still larger proportion live under conditions which make more than a bare living possible.

This is a great country!

"KNOCKING" THE GOVERNMENT

The world is full of people who try to blame their own unsuccess, unhappiness or incompetence upon somebody else. Everybody knows somebody like that. They are the same sort of people who are always "agin the Government". The market for crops is good or bad because the Government at Washington is Republican or Democratic. Business is slow because the president did this or didn't do that. Let a few banks fail and immediately some of the chronic kickers rush to the front with the explanation that the Federal Reserve System is a failure.

Fair criticism of the Government is entirely proper and within the rights of every citizen. The tendency to hold the Government responsible for everything unpleasant without ever giving it credit when the conditions are satisfactory is, however, just another manifestation of the childish impulse to shift the blame from one's own shoulders to that of somebody else.

The very people who make the most fuss about the Government's "failure" when things are not going to please them, would be the first to protest if the Federal Government should undertake to actually run the business of the Nation. The last thing that the vast majority of Americans want is a paternal government. We as a people firmly believe in the dictum, attributed to Thomas Jefferson, that, that government is best which governs the least. It is possibly true that most of the loose criticism of the Government is merely a form of "letting off steam". It doesn't hurt the government any and it relieves the emotional strain of the person doing the criticizing.

This year everybody is going to hear a great deal of criticism and defense of the Government. We are electing all the members of the next Congress, one-third of the Senators, and Governors and other officials of more than half the States. Candidates and their friends are going to tell us how different things would be if they were in instead of the ones who are in, or how foolish it would be to put the other fellows in when they have made such good records. All that signifies, for the greater part, is the desire of the "Ins" to stay in and the "Outs" to get in.

The only persons who will be fooled are the simple-minded ones who really think that the Government can change economic conditions over night and at will. All any government at Washington can do, all it ought to try to do, is to remove any obstacles that exist to the free flow of business and industry, to the right of every American citizen to work out his own individual salvation, economically and otherwise, in his own way, so long as he does not infringe upon the right of any other citizen to do the same thing.

MURDER

Ten persons out of every 100,000 are victims of murderers every year in the United States.

That is an appalling record. Nothing like that number of murders occurs in any other civilized country. But that fact, published everywhere, gives our own people as well as foreigners an incorrect impression of the life of the United States and in the cities which may be called "murder centers".

Think it over for a minute. How many people do you know who have had any contact of any kind with murder? How many people in this community have been murdered, in recent years?

We all know that the life of every lawabiding citizen, going about his or her business and not seeking trouble, is as safe in our own midst as it is anywhere in the world. Gunmen do not prowl around our streets and byways looking for victims. Women are not afraid to go to the stores for fear of being shot down by stray bullets or intentionally. Yet the picture of life in the United States as Europe sees it would have all of us in constant danger of being killed by some irresponsible murderer.

Even in Chicago, from which we have more news of murders and murderers than from any other place in America, conditions are not at all like that. Americans unfamiliar with the ways of big cities hesitate to go to Chicago for fear of being killed. Chicago newspapers report that travelers with several hours between trains frequently do not dare to leave the railroad station to look around the beautiful city, because they have heard so much about Chicago gunmen. The International Rotary Clubs recently felt impelled to send out word to its members everywhere in the world, assuring them that they would not be killed if they came to a convention in Chicago!

The plain fact of the matter is that in almost every case of murder the victim is either a criminal, an associate of criminals, or engaged in some reckless undertaking which exposes him unnecessarily to attack. Leaving out the people who have invited murder by their own acts, and officers of the law taking the necessary risks of their occupation, our proportion of murders to population, even in Chicago, is probably as low as in England or France.

That does not dispose, however, of the fact that there has developed in America a criminal element which is almost defiant in its attitude toward the authorities of the law. These men do not fear the law, because they have found so many ways of evading the punishment which is due them for their crimes. The basic trouble is with our courts and with the public sentiment which permits travesties on justice to go unheeded and unchecked.

The Way of Life
By BRUCE BARTON

DO PEOPLE FEEL BETTER BECAUSE YOU PASSED BY?

I was in a doctor's office by appointment at five-thirty when his telephone rang. A woman's voice at the other end of the wire asked him to call at the house that evening.

His voice betrayed his irritation, but he promised to call. Then he snapped the receiver on the hook and exploded.

"There is a woman who has nothing to do all day but gad about. She might just as easily have called me this morning or early in the afternoon. But, no, she has to put it off and spoil my evening.

"Nobody but a doctor has any idea of how inconsiderate people can be".

On two recent trips with two different men I had an interesting opportunity to contrast their conduct toward their fellow human beings.

One of them had made several million dollars in the past few years. Whenever he entered a dining car or a hotel he wanted everybody to understand that he is rich and important. Waiters dislike him, even though he tips liberally. I sometimes felt imbarrassed by his critical demands for attention.

The manner of the other man is the exact reverse. You would never guess that he is a power in world industry. He never gives orders, but makes suggestions or very courteous requests. He seems surprised that everybody should want to do him a favor. He can make a waiter or a station porter feel a new sense of self respect merely by his smile.

A noted preacher once remarked that one of the finest of all the sayings of Jesus is this: "I have compassion on the multitude."

Said the preacher: "Many men can be virtuous. Many can be honest in a hard, self-righteous way. But how many are really considerate? How many feel instinctive respect and sympathy? How many have compassion?"

A lot of twisted standards have somehow grown up in the world. A lot of very righteous people seem to think that a man is good if he does not smoke, does not take a drink, does not do this or that.

These are negative and unimportant. The real mark of a Christian and a gentleman is whether he treats other people as he would like to be treated.

Whether they feel better or worse because he has passed by.

THE RISEN LORD AND THE GREAT COMMISSION
Matthew 28:1-20
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

"Weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning" was never truer than when the first day of the week came after the body of Jesus had been placed in tomb, following the crucifixion on Friday. parts of three days had passed, during which the Jewish Sabbath had been observed. As soon as work could again be taken up certain women made ready to perform the usual rites upon the body of their dear Friend. With spices they came very early to the garden tomb.

Insurmountable difficulties did not hold them back, though it was but natural that they should question en route, "Who will roll us away the stone?" For a great stone sealed the mouth of that sepulchre. Then came an active lesson that many will never learn. We worry so much about situations that never arise. For, meanwhile, the resurrection of the body of Jesus had taken place. There had been an earthquake, not to let the body out but to permit the women to see within the dark tomb. When they arrived there was a messenger in the person of an angel to declare the good news and to give them instruction for immediate service. "He is not here", they were told. Today many go to the grave to weep, as if their loved one was there entombed. No spirit has ever been placed in the grave. Death refers to the body only. At once with the death of the body our loved ones are in the spirit world.

The records in all four Gospels should be read with care to obtain every detail. Jesus begins to appear to individuals and to groups. He met a company of women as they returned to the city. Then He came to Mary Magdalene, who tarried by the open sepulchre and thought He was the gardener, as she looked through her tear-dimmed eyes. A new world of joy was her's when He spoke just her name and said "Mary".

Such joyous news was not to be kept by anyone. The angels said, and He confirmed it, that they should go tell His disciples, and even Peter was specially named, lest this one who had so grievously denied Him should not know that all had been forgiven. There are at least eleven recorded appearances and there surely must have been another, though no record is given of it. Jesus certainly showed Himself to His beloved mother, for whom He evidenced such concern when in the midst of His agonies on the cross. During a period of forty days these various manifestations occurred.

It was fitting that Jesus should make a mountain in Galilee a place for a special conference with His disciples. It was in that area that His greatest amount of work was accomplished during the three years of public ministry. The attitude of the disciples is an index of the way in which mankind will ever regard Him. "They worshiped Him, but some doubted". First He reasserted His almighty power and the resurrection was direct testimony thereto. Then He revealed that Kingdom-building had just begun, with Himself as the chief corner stone. He would go away soon, but their work and that of those who joined with them would be abiding. They were given the Great Commission "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all nations". As His love is without limit, so the scope of their and our work is to be equally extensive. As they went they were to TEACH. Believers were to testify of their faith through Trinitarian baptism. Climaxing all is an all-inclusive promise. As they went forth on this commission, "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Tramp: Just my luck, lady, I'm left-handed.

"Tilly, you were entertaining a man in the kitchen last night, were you not?"

"That's for him to say, ma'am. I did my best."

Film Producer: You now dash into the burning building, fling Miss Whatsername over your shoulder, clamber out with her through the roof, and then escape along the telegraph wires, still holding her.

Exhausted Actor: Here, dash it, I've just done all that.

Producer: Of course you have. That was the rehearsal.

IN THE STUDIOS
WITH ALBERT ZUGSMITH JR

Columbia Broadcasting Company announcers have been given their summer uniforms of double breasted blue serge jackets, white flannel trousers, white sport shoes, white shirts and blue cravats. Production men will wear the same uniform, but with polka dot ties to distinguish them from the "signing offers". Wonder what some of the choruses of the radio revues will wear?

Determined to find out what type of programs were the most popular with the radio fans, I investigated until returns from 73 stations in the United States and Canada indicate that dance music is by far the favorite of the listener-in. Popular songs gave them a run for the money, however, with old-time songs close on their heels. Jazz was fourth in the running. Variety programs got the next highest number of votes with musical novelties sixth on the list. Semi-classical music tied for last place with comedy skits. The rest didn't get enough votes to record. Ho hum.

What do the radio stars do when they are not broadcasting? Ah, ha—secrets you want to know.

Well, Evangeline Adams, for one, collects early American furniture.

Will Rogers, when he isn't playing polo, is usually scowling, frowning, or counting on his fingers how much his polo ponies are costing him.

Guy Lombardo says his favorite recreation is sleeping and I believe him.

Rudy Vallee says that he has no spare time in which to do anything. He should begin worrying about that.

Floyd Gibbons likes nothing better than to argue whether battleships or airplanes will win the next war. He holds out for airplanes. He would.

Mr. and Mrs.—Joe and Vi of WABC—spend their spare time dodging photographers, who as yet have not snapped them.

Ginger Rogers likes to cook—of all things—spice cookies.

Adela Vasa is also culinarily inclined, her masterpiece being the transmution of sour milk into an Armenian dessert called "Baklava".

Harry Swan likes to buy lollipops for children, which I think is only an excuse to have an all-day sucker himself.

La Belle Rose, of the Nut Club, says, in his falsetto voice, that you ought to know. Ah ha!

More anon.

DID YOU KNOW—

That Rudy Vallee receives in his different pay envelopes over $10,000 a week?

That the Nut Club, broadcasting over WHOM, WEBS and WELK and other stations receive over 1,000 telephone requests a night for certain favored numbers? And a good quarter of the calls are long distance, so they say.

A backyard playground equipped with slides, swings, large boxes and a sand pile will add to the children's happiness this summer and keep them away from the danger of motor traffic.

Summer silks will last longer if washed in lukewarm suds and rinsed in water of the same temperature.

TODAY AND TOMORROW

RADBURN

Something new in town building has been accomplished in New Jersey, twenty miles out from New York City. The town of Radburn has been planned and built with an eye first to safety in the streets. It has been laid out so that all streets in the residential districts are "dead-end" thoroughfares. No thru traffic rushes past homes, endangering the lives of children. Schools, playgrounds, parks and recreation centers have been so located that no child has to cross a street carrying motor traffic to get to any of them. And there are plenty of open spaces, in the midst of which dwellings have been built which house today about 600 people, where there was nothing but a farm a year ago.

Radburn calls itself "Tomorrow's Town". It is certain that the new method of town planning must develop to meet the new tools of civilization.

MIRACLES

Nothing but gas and water are needed to make artificial silk, by a new process discovered by Professor Harold Hibbard of McGill University, Montreal. That is amazing, even to such of us as have got used to the idea of transmission of electric currents through space. Gas—carbon dioxide, produced from coal—is invisible and, to our unaided senses, without weight. Water is a fluid which takes solid form only as ice, in our ordinary experience. But by combining the two to make a permanent, tangible solid which will take the place of rayon fibers produced from cotton or wood pulp, Dr. Hibbert has performed a miracle which seems none the less miraculous when he explains how it is done.

This is another step in the progress of science toward the goal of producing in the factory, by swift, cheap methods, everything we need to eat, wear and use. The method, in general, is to take the short cut where Nature takes the long road around.

DOLLAR

Eighty-six years old, owner of a fleet of fifty great passenger and freight ships and one of the world's largest lumber enterprises, Captain Robert Dollar still runs the details of his own great business. He started to work at 11, in his native Scotland, at wages of 60 cents a week. He has made every cent of his great fortune by hard work and still gets to his office in San Francisco at 20 minutes to nine every morning. When he feels like it he calls up Mrs. Dollar, tells her to pack the bag for a trip, and the happy old couple start out on one of his own ships for a voyage to China or around the world. On every such trip Captain Dollar finds new opportunities for American trade and new business for the Dollar ships.

SPELLING

There is a great revival of interest in the old-fashioned "spelling-bee". Helen Jenson, a 13-year-old girl of Council Bluffs, has just won a prize of $1,000 and the title of National Spelling Champion in a contest at Washington. Newspaper men, Congressmen, women's clubs and other bodies have been conducting spelling bees in many cities.

This is interesting and more or less important. Correct spelling is an accomplishment which reveals a great deal of the character in the individual. Good spellers are persons who concentrate on details, who have a keen eye and a pictorial memory. Few persons who learn chiefly by ear are good spellers. The "phonetic" method of teaching children to read, a fad which is being abandoned in many schools, is responsible for much of the atrocious spelling which makes so many girls unable to earn more than a bare wage as stenographers. Good spellers remember words as pictures. And that is as it should be. Spelling is of importance only in connecting with reading and writing, and reading and writing are a means of expression designed to appeal to the eye only.

TEACHERS

One reason why our public schools are not as good as they could and should be is that we do not pay the teachers the same respect—to say nothing of salary—that they do in Europe. To be a school teacher in Germany, for instance, is to achieve at once a degree of social standing equivalent to that of a physician or a lawyer.

Texas set an example years ago of one way of increasing the teacher's self-respect. In 1860 a "teachery" was built in the Blum school district in Guadalupe County—a home for the teacher. Now Texas has 1,330 of these teachers' homes, costing an average of $2,200. One teacher, H. E. Dietel, of Schumansville, taught one school and lived in one teachery for 40 years. He became the foremost citizen of his community.

The rural school wtihout a home for the teacher or teachers is a relic of the dark ages.

Many Factors Enter Into Getting Cream onto Bottles of Milk

Thirty years ago the dairy farmer's interest in the creaming of milk centered about the gravity separation of cream, while today this interest is directed chiefly at the amount of cream forming on a quart bottle of milk. Dairy specialists at the State Experiment Station at Geneva have been making a study of the many factors which enter in to the creaming of milk, with particular reference to the part played by milk plant operations.

Among the more practical problems under consideration by the Station specialists is the influence of the breed of dairy cow upon the creaming ability of the milk. Commenting on this phase of the question, J. C. Marquardt of the Station Dairy Division says, "The experiments at Geneva show that normal Holstein and Jersey cows produce the same volume of cream in proportion to the amount of fat in the milk. That is, for each per cent of fat in the milk there will be four per cent of cream volume on the milk bottle, regardless of the breed.

"This was determined by measuring the cream layers forming on milk in cylinders, and involved many thousand samples taken at the barn directly after milking. The cream layers were measured after the milk had remained in ice water for 18 hours.

"Our experiments showed that sickness influenced the creaming power of the milk from individual cows. Sick cows generally produced milk with abnormally deep cream layers. Also, certain cows gave uniform cream layers on their milk from day to day, while other cows varied widely in this respect. The season and the age of the cows do not seem to influence the creaming power of milk.

"The creaming power of the milk of individual cows, the milk of individual herds, or the mixed milk in the vat can be easily determined. A graduated 100 cubic centimeter cylinder is filled with the milk, and observed after remaining in ice water for 18 hours. The volume of cream forming is recorded and divided by the fat content. This gives the factor, which for normal milk will be 4. In case a lower value is obtained, an explanation of the factors involved may be obtained from Technical Bulletin 157, which describes the Station tests, or by correspondence with the dairy division at the Station."

WORK CORN ONLY TO KILL WEEDS

Cultivate Shallowly and Do Not Break Roots, Says Professor Gustafson.

On soils where rains cause a crust to form cultivation of corn is beneficial to the crop even if the weeds are under control. Otherwise, weed control is the principal object of cultivating corn, or at least it is the main thing accomplished by cultivation, says Professor A. F. Gustafson of the New York State College of Agriculture.

Experiments show that corn which had three shallow cultivations yielded an eight years average of 45 bushels of shelled corn. The gain for complete weed control and lack of root disturbance whatever was four bushels. Where weeds were allowed to grow unmolested the yield was only seven bushels to the acre.

The experiments do not show that New York farmers should go back to hand hoeing the corn crop, but they do show that corn cannot compete with weeds in a normal season.

On soils comparatively free from stones, the blade or surface cultivator as used in the mid-west is probably the best implement to use. For the main part of New York, however, the shovel cultivator is the best type in general use. Three or four shovels on each side on a one-row cultivator do excellent work.

The first cultivation of corn may be to a depth of about three inches. If the corn is not over six to eight inches high at the second cultivation, the second cultivation may be at the same depth. The third, or all cultivations after the corn is twelve to fifteen inches high, should not be more than two inches deep. Still shallower cultivation, which is possible with four shovels on a side, is better and the inner shovel on each side must be kept well away from the corn. There should be no tearing or breaking of the roots if it is possible to control weeds otherwise.

PROTECTING EVERGREENS FROM INSECT PESTS

Station Specialists Hope to Develop Cheap and Effective Control Measures.

Insect pests of fruit and vegetable crops have of necessity received first consideration at the hands of entomologists, and new problems are constantly coming to the front with the appearance of new pests and of new materials for use in spray and dust mixtures. The insects attacking ornamentals, particularly the evergreens, are now to receive special attention from specialists at the State Experiment Station at Geneva who hope to develop spray and dust mixtures to combat these pests that will prove as effective and safe as those now used on fruit trees.

Among the important insect pests that will receive immediate attention are the spruce gall aphis, described as the worst insect pest of the spruce; the red mite which causes evergreens to turn red in mid-summer; and the spruce bud worm which eats the leaves of the trees. In addition, means of controlling the pine scale, the larch saw-fly and the various species of aphids that attack evergreens will be given a thoro test.

F. L. Gambrell, assistant entomologist at the Station, has been assigned to this project, according to a statement issued by Station officials. As a first step in studying the important insect pests of evergreens, Mr. Gambrell is assembling a collection of more important ornamental evergreens. These are being set out on the Station grounds in an attractive landscape arrangement and in a convenient manner for experimental purposes.

Nurserymen in various parts of the United States, and particularly those situated in close proximity to the Station, have been generous in donations of specimens of ornamental evergreens, say the Station authorities. Already many valuable and unusual types have been set out, and it is expected that the planting will eventually serve not only as a testing ground for insecticides, but also as an interesting variety collection.

UTILIZE WHEY AND SAVE THE VITAMINS

After Making Cottage Cheese Use the Remainder in Bread, Cake, Gelatin and Frozen Desserts.

Instead of discarding whey left after making cottage cheese use it in bread, cake, gelatin and frozen desserts, pudding sauces or even summer beverages, suggests the New York State College of Home Economics at Cornell University. Whey is valuable as a food since it contains the water-soluble and part of the fat-soluble growth-promoting vitamins, much of the calcium and often most of the carbohydrate of the original milk. It lends itself especially well to dishes in which lemon is used.

Whey fluff is an attractive and delicious summer dessert. Soak two tablespoons of gelatin in one-third cup of cold water and dissolve it over a pan of boiling water. Mix the gelatin thoroughly with two cups of whey, add two-thirds cup of sugar and set the mixture in a pan of ice water. When it begins to thicken around the edges, beat it well with an egg beater, add the grated rind and juice of one-half lemon and one cup of raw carrots grated fine. Fold in a stiffly beaten white of egg and turn at once into a mold. Serve the fluff with soft custard or whipped cream. Strawberries, rhubarb, pineapple orange or peaches may be used instead of carrot.

Sherbet may also be made with whey, fruit and gelatin. Soak a tablespoon of gelatin in one-fourth cup of cold water and dissolve it over boiling water. Mix a quart of whey, the juice of one lemon and one and one-fourth cups of sugar and add the gelatin. Pack and freeze the mixture. When it begins to thicken add one cup of crushed fruit such as pineapple, berries, peaches or cherries and continue the freezing.

STATE PRODUCE IN NEW YORK CITY

Fruits and Vegetables

New York, June 13—The wholesale vegetable market closed in a disastrous condition at the end of the week and many carloads of produce were not accepted by commission merchants from transportation companies because of their inability to realize even the transportation costs, according to the New York office of the State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Cherries

Cherries are gradually increasing in volume and improving in size and quality. Most of the sweet variety from the Hudson Valley sold on Friday from 50 to 75 cents, in four-quart baskets, while sour, red cherries brought from 14 to 20 cents per quart basket.

Strawberries Higher

Strawberries were in lighter receipt and with the demand more active, particularly on attractive quality, large-sized fruit, values strengthened in a firmer market. Most sales on the Hudson Valley strawberries sold at 20 to 25 cents per quart.

Live Poultry

There was a liberal supply of broilers on the market during the week, while fowls were in light supply. Fancy heavy broilers sold readily and these only obtained top prices which generally declined toward the end of the week. Lightweight and poor broilers were very irregular. Fowls and ducks were slow. The market closed weak. Fowls were 18 and 19 cents per pound for leghorn and colored 21 to 23 cents. Broilers: Rocks, 30 to 40 cents; reds 25 to 33 cents; leghorns 15 to 23 cents.

Dressed Calves

The market was overloaded all week on country dressed calves, which were mostly heavyweights. The demand was very slow till Friday and at irregular prices of 10 to 15 cents per pound, regardless of the grades. Market closed weak and irregular with a number of heavy choice calves still unsold.

Livestock

The receipts of steers and bulls were light. The demand was slow and the prices obtained were lower. Cows were in slow demand but sold at steady prices. Vealers were in moderate supply but met a slow demand at 50 cents lower. Good to choice sold at $11.00 to $12.50; medium $8.00 to $10.50. The supply of lambs were moderate and coupled with an active prices advanced 25 cents. Sheep met a slow demand causing prices to decline. Good to choice mostly $12.00 to $12.50. One deck choice $13.00; medium $10.50 to $11.75; common throwouts $9.00 to $10.00. Ewes fully 50 cents or more lower. Good $4.50 down.

Butter-Cheese-Eggs

The butter market was weak and creamery salted higher score and extra (92 score) each declined one-fourth cent per pound. Creamery salted sold at 33 to 33 1-2 cents per pound, extra (92 score) 32 1-2 cents.

The cheese market was easy at the close. New York State held, fancy to special, was 24 to 26 cents per pound; fresh fancy 18 cents.

The egg market was firmer on nearby eggs and nearby hennery whites closely selected extras and nearby hennery browns, top quality advanced one-half cent per dozen closing at 29 to 32 respectively.

TO JUDGE POULTRY AT STATE COLLEGE

Annual School June 23 to 28—Out-of-State Authorities Added to Cornell Staff for Occasion.

Four nationally-known poultry authorities join the staff of the department of poultry husbandry to act as instructors at the thirteenth annual poultry judging and breeding school at Cornell University June 23 to 28.

W. R. Graham, head of the poultry department of the Ontario Agricultural College; J. G. Halpin, head of the poultry department of the University of Wisconsin; Roy E. Jones, head of the department of poultry husbandry at the Connecticut Agricultural College, and John Vandervort, head of poultry extension of the Pennsylvania State College will instruct groups at the school.

Dean R. Marble of the Cornell staff will report the latest findings in his study of factors affecting egg weight.

The course is conducted by means of lectures and laboratories. The teaching is largely by demonstrations and laboratory exercises in the handling of fowls; hence the class will be divided into small groups. Trap-nested birds, Rocks, Reds, Wyandottes and S. C. White Leghorns from the college flocks will be used for laboratory practice work.

Students must be at least 18 years old and managing a poultry enterprise as an important part of a business, or be professionally engaged in teaching, research, judging or writing on poultry subjects. A full description of the school may be had by addressing the college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

Seventeen counties have entered one contestant each in the milking contest; they are Orange, Genesee, Oneida, Columbia, Broome, Madison, Livingston, Tompkins, Onondaga, Cortland, Monroe, Otsego, Jefferson, Oswego, Schuyler, Greene and Rensselaer. Other livestock activities include sheep, hog and dairy cattle judging contests, and a new feature, the cattle liveweight estimating contest. Stockmen's canes will be awarded those who show the best judgment in estimating cattle weights.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

"T.B."

My rural readers will pardon me, I'm sure, for once more calling their attention to what is still one of man's fiercest, most unrelenting foes; it seems to me that good advice in the presence of an enemy is never out of place.

Thoughtful men have been battling this scourge since the dawn of history; for its annihilation men of great wealth and greater hearts have spent countless millions in research, and the noble work still goes on. Just what measure of success has been achieved may be noted by any observing one who reads; and our more recent decades have been singularly noted for advances made.

Tuberculosis is a communicable disease. If you never come in contact with it you are fortunate indeed. But contacts in the densely populated districts are often unavoidable; the fog of dust you encounter on the windy thoroughfare may contain many of the death-dealing germs; your resisting power against disease may be low; your own lungs may become infected, especially if you are carrying a colony of influenzal or other baccilli, you never can tell.

Steer clear of the person who coughs without covering the mouth and nose with a handkerchief. Be duly alert against the fellow with a chronic cough, who continually expectorates on the grass under the shade tree, or on the sands of the beach near by. Shun the resorts where "lungers" (poor fellows!) abound, if possible; the best precaution you may take is none too good; prevention is many leagues superior to cure.

It is the duty of physicians to survey their clientele with eternal vigilance. Teach them to observe every precaution against scattering or contracting disease. I am sure that proper quarantine—and that only—will end the "white plague" for good and all. Outdoor air is not always pure—indeed far from it in crowded localities, where ignorant victims of disease are carriers and distributors; promiscuous expectoration is a crime.

CONTROLLED GRAZING BEST FOR PASTURES

Rest Period Necessary Even if Fertilized, Says Professor Hartwig—Advises Fencing Lot Into Plots.

Controlled grazing, or dividing the pasture into smaller fields and alternating the stock in the different fields gives the grass a chance to store plant food and increases the feed from the same amount of ground, according to H. B. Hartwig of Cornell University.

Fertilizers are called plant foods, but actually fertilizers are not plant foods, he says. Plant food is what results after the fertilizer elements have been manufactured in the factory of the plant. The leaf is the factory. Cut off the leaf and the raw materials will not be changed to plant food. In fact, there is no quicker way to kill a plant than to provide plenty of fertliizer and then completely prevent the appearance of green leaves.

Although fencing is expensive it will often pay in increased feed, and better feed, and in extreme cases it saves a reseeding. Mr. Hartwig cites one western range experiment where the pasture area was divided into four parts. Each year one part was left ungrazed until after the plants reached maturity. This simple procedure made the entire pasture over four times as productive as adjoining pastures that were grazed without a rest. This difference was not due to self-seeding, but to the storing up of a reserve supply of food in the roots of the plants.

In addition to allowing rest periods the fencing favors the growth of the best pasture plants, helps control weeds and less desirable pasture plants, and gives a better distribution of the droppings of manure over the whole area.

KILL LARGE SNAKE

Rattlesnakes are not infrequent visitors in the vicinity of Addison this summer. William Smith and his family were surprised by the arrival of one of these visitors near their home on Catherine Creek Monday afternoon. The snake was stopped in its life's journey by Mr. Smith, Mrs. Smith and Raymond Rice, with the aid of the Smith sons within ten feet of their back door.

It was five feet eleven inches long and boasted eleven rattles and one button. The season seems favorable for the growth of large specimens of rattlers, this approximating in size the one seen by Mr. Sanford at his home on Front street.

Happenings that Occurred In Ancient Days In Addison

(By Horatio Guinnip)

MOTHER'S DAY

Since I began this rhapsody, Mother's Day has intervened, and "she" claims precedence to all other subjects except that pertaining to her Creator. So I cannot refrain from digressing again to commemorate her memory.

In "listening in" on the radio on Mother's Day, I was reminded of some of the many sacrifices that my mother, many, many years ago, had made for me, but which I had forgotten. I am loath to own this lack of veneration but memory, as you well know, is a treacherous thing to friend as well as to foe. I could see my mother again as she was when I was a child, kindly leading me with her hand up stairs to go to bed. I could hear her teaching me to say:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep,
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take,
This I ask for Jesus sake. Amen"

I could see her snugly tucking me up in my little trundle bed and lovingly kiss me good night. Then she quietly descended the stairs with the light; all was dark and quiet in the room and I soon fell asleep. O God, that those innocent and happy days might come back again!

When childhood had passed into youth, I could see my mother again in the sitting room seated in her old arm chair, rocking to and fro as she used to do, knitting stockings for me. She tosses one of them to me and I hear her say, "my dear boy, try this one on". At the same time I could see that her own stockings were old and full of holes. So you can see that her thoughts were only of me; that my feet might not be cold. She did not seem to me to care for her own comfort so long as I did not suffer from cold. Then I felt what love meant more than I had ever realized before.

I could see her again leaning over the hot kitchen stove with her face moist with perspiration, baking pancakes for me as I sat at the table cramming them down. I knew that she was more hungry than I, for she had been up since early dawn doing the chores that I should have done, and mowing the lawn. It was then nine o'clock; school time.

As I grew in years I began going out nights, and my mother pleaded with me with tears in her eyes not to go. She said to me, "I do it for your own good". But I did not listen to her. I continued to go and gave her as an excuse that I went to see some of my school mates; to get them to help me in some of my lessons at school. But as a matter of fact I went to the billiard room to play pool. One night I was out longer than usual; until "Jes" Shepard the proprietor, turned the lights out. When I reached home, the house was dark, and as I entered the sitting room I saw a candle flickering in the window almost burned out. My mother was sitting by the stove in her rocking chair with a shawl around her shoulders for the fire had gone out and the room was cold. She did not see me as I entered the room for her eyes were closed, nor hear me for she was faintly singing, the pathetic song, "Where is My Boy Tonight?" I stood and listened for a few moments—for I didn't know what else to do—until the sentiment struck to my heart and I began to cry. That awakened my mother from her reverie and she arose from her chair and embraced me. That was the last time that I ever intentionally disobeyed my mother.

In closing this episode, I would say to my young friends that with the exception of your Father in Heaven, that your mother has been, is now, and ever will be your best friend. You owe her a debt of gratitude that you never can pay her. That you may have nothing to regret. When she is gone, may you love, cherish and obey her.

—G.

FATHER'S DAY

While it is fitting that we show recognition to mother for the countless acts of kindness shown us, it seems to me to be no less fitting to dedicate a day to father for the sacrifices that he makes for us. For next to mother, except our Heavenly Father, he is the best friend that we ever had or ever shall have. We cannot realize the many acts of sacrifice that he makes for us. He denies himself many of the comforts and necessities of life that we may be happy. When sick, and not really able to work, he toils uncomplainingly, and unknowningly to us, so not to detract from our happiness. In short he deprives himself of many things that he needs to make life enjoyable so as to add to our enjoyments.

Such was true in the case of my father when I was a lad, and such is true of many other fathers today who are wearing their lives away that their children may be happy.

My father, when I was a small boy, went down the river to Columbia to sell some lumber, and while there he was taken sick, and was under a doctor's care for five months. When he returned home he was so thin that few of his friends knew him. But he was bound to go to work because he thought that his family needed his help, and he died a short time afterwards from the effect of tuberculosis. They called the disease at that time consumption.

A strang thing happened when my father was returning home from Columbia. In those days there few railroads in the country, and none at all along the Susquehanna River, where my father had to come, and it was impossible to hire horses and wagons, so the raftmen and others, who went down the river had to walk back, too, and that was a hard job for him to do.

In those days, too, they did not carry the mails regularly, so my mother did not hear from my father often, and while he was gone, she was left alone in her home on Main Street near where Boyle's news store now stands, with three small children to support. I was not on earth at that time. My mother got lonely and discouraged. She did not know whether my father would ever come back. So she hired a man to take her and her three small children back to Ithaca where she had come from. There were no other conveyances at that time between Addison and Ithaca. She locked up the house and started off, not knowing whether she would ever come back again or not.—Allow me to digress here to state that her father, John Smith, owned at that time a farm situated on part of the land where Cornell University now stands, and that the writer later on owned a farm of 100 acres laying between the Dryden and the Fall Creek roads, which the University now also owns. Twenty years ago I foolishly sold the farm to the University for a song.

Now back to my mother on her long and lonely journey to Ithaca. When she arrived at or near Elmira she met with a great surprise, I may say an apparition. My father, like one who had risen from the dead, appeared unsummoned and unexpected. She was confounded. I do not know to this day how they happened to meet. Neither of them ever told me what was said nor what was done, except that the horses' heads were turned back towards home, and that there were five passengers in the carriage after that, in place of four as there had been before. This does not mean that my father and mother came near separating for they never thought of such a thing. Of course my mother was grieved because my father had been gone so long, but that was no fault of his or hers.

I can see my father today—although nearly four score years have passed away since he died—lying on the couch in our old sitting room, as life ebbed away. And I can hear him faintly say to me again, "my son, pray to the Lord to give you grace to be kind to your mother". Those were the last words that he ever spoke to me. At the close of the day, on New Year's Eve, in the year 1857, as the good folks of the old Methodist Church were bidding adieu to the old year, my father, too, bade adieu to everything most dear to him here.

In final closing of this episode, I would say to my young friends that your father, undoubtedly, is as dear to you as mine was to me, so love and respect him, that you may have nothing to regret when you must bid him adieu, never to meet him again until he and you shall meet in Heaven after life's journey is through.

RULES AND REGULATIONS

1. No salaried employee of this newspaper is eligible to enter this competition. This does not apply to country correspondents.
2. Any other reputable man, woman or child, residing in these sections or surrounding territory, is eligible to enter this campaign and compete for the prizes.
3. The winners of the prizes will be decided by their accredited votes, said votes being represented by ballots issued on subscriptions and coupons clipped from the papers. This newspaper reserves the right to include advertising and job printing if so desired.
4. Participants in this campaign are not confined to their own section or community in which to secure votes, but may take orders anywhere in this section; or, for that matter, anywhere in the State or United States.
5. Cash must accompany all orders where votes are desired.
6. Votes are free. It costs the subscriber nothing extra to cast votes for their favorite. Votes must be asked for at the time of paying subscriptions, otherwise subscriber waives this privilege.
7. Votes are not transferable. Candidates cannot withdraw in favor of another candidate. Should a candidate withdraw from the race, his or her votes will be cancelled. Neither will it be permissible for candidates to give or transfer subscriptions to another candidate. Votes on such transferred subscriptions will be subject for disqualification at the discretion of the management.
8. Any collusion on the part of candidates to nullify competition, or any other combination formed to the detriment of candidates of this newspaper will not be tolerated. Any candidate taking part in such combination stands liable to forfeit all rights to a prize or commission.
9. All votes issued on ballots may be held in reserve and cast at the discretion of candidates or this newspaper. The free vote coupons appearing from time to time in the paper must be cast before expiration date appearing thereon.
10. In the event of a tie for any one of the prizes a prize identical in value will be given each tying contestant.
11. Participants in this campaign are authorized agents of this newspaper, but it is understood and agreed that they will be responsible for all moneys collected and will remit such amounts in full each week to the campaign department.
12. No statement or promise made by any representative or candidate varying from the rules and statements appearing through the columns of this newspaper will be recognized by the publisher.
13. In case of typographical or other error it is understood that neither the publisher or campaign manager shall be held responsible, except to make the necessary correction upon discovery of same.

CAMPAIGN PLAN IN BRIEF

The object of this big prize distribution is two-fold. Primarily to increase the subscription lists of the Addison Advertiser and the Woodhull Sentinel, to collect advance subscription payments from subscribers, and at the same time to afford the live-wire, energetic hustlers of these towns and surrounding territory an opportunity to profit, and in a BIG way, through their spare time during the next few weeks. So it is a plan that works both ways and to the ultimate good of all concerned.

In order to gain this end quickly and advantageously, the most valuable lists of prizes ever offered by any newspaper in this section has been made ready for distribution among those who participate most actively. Ambition and energy are the only requisites for success.

The plan adopted is the fairest and most impartial conceivable. There will be no "special vote offers" inaugurated during the life of this campaign. The plan is straightforward and simple, and is fully outlined in the announcement.

Let it be understood at the very outset that this is not a "beauty" nor "popularity" contest, but a strictly legitimate competitive proposition for enterprising men and women, and one in which no element of chance enters. One feature of this campaign is the fact that "Everybody Wins". There will be no losers in this race!

14. Candidates who remain ACTIVE to the finish, but fail to win one of the regular prizes offered, will be paid a twenty-five per cent cash commission on all new subscription money turned in to their account. It is distinctly understood, however, that in the event any candidate becomes INACTIVE, failing to make a regular cash report, he or she will, at the discretion of the management, become disqualified and thereby forfeit all right to a prize or commission.

15. To insure absolute fairness in the awarding of prizes, the race will be brought to a close under a sealed ballot box. During the last part of the campaign, a ballot box — locked and sealed — will repose in the vault of the local bank, where candidates and their friends will deposit their final collection and reserve votes. In this way no one, not even the campaign manager, can possibly know the voting strength of the various candidates, which preclude any possibility of favoritism and insures fairness to the minutest degree.

16. This newspaper reserves the right to amend the rules and conditions of this campaign, if necessary, for the protection of candidates or this newspaper.

17. This newspaper guarantees fair and impartial treatment to all participants, but should any question arise the decision of the management will be absolute and final.

18. In becoming a candidate, participants agree to abide by the above conditions.

HOW TO ENTER—WHAT TO DO

The first thing to do is to clip the Entry Coupon appearing on Page 1; fill in your name and address and mail, or deliver, to the campaign department of this newspaper at once. This coupon entitles you, or the person whom you might wish to enter, with 10,000 FREE votes. These votes are given as a starter—to speed you on your way to win. Only one such Entry Coupon will be accepted for each entrant.

The next step is to call on, or write, the campaign department for a free outfit. Thus equipped, you have but to see your friends and acquaintances and have them pay up their subscriptions through you. That's all there is to it! However, let us say you will never get anywhere unless you make the start—the earlier the better. Once started, let no one discourage you. Anything worth having is worth striving for. Six short weeks and you may be riding in your own BIG Automobile.

HOW VOTES ARE SECURED

It takes votes to win, and they are secured in the following ways: First, by clipping the Free Coupon Votes appearing in each issue of this newspaper. There is no limit to the number of these coupons you may secure. Get your friends to save them for you. They all count. Begin gathering NOW while they are good for 200 votes each. After next week these coupons will be reduced to 100 votes; the following week to 10 votes, and after that they will be discontinued entirely. The only restriction placed on voting these coupons is that they must be cast before the expiration date appearing thereon.

The other, and much faster way to accumulate votes in this campaign, is by securing new and renewal subscriptions to this newspaper (the right is reserved to include job printing and advertising if so desired.) On each order secured a certain number of votes are issued, the number varying to the amount paid and during which "period" same are received at the campaign department. See schedule of votes elsewhere.

EARLY START MEANS EASY FINISH

The advantages of an early start are manifest. The campaign is of such short duration that immediate action is necessary for success. Orders taken during the early part of the campaign carry the MAXIMUM number of votes. Then, too, the first in the field undoubtedly get the choice of votes and subscriptions, while those who put off entering until a later date will have to take what is left.

Don't lose valuable time "waiting to see what the other fellow is going to do", but pitch right in and show the "other fellow" how to do it!

ADDISON SHUT OUT KNOXVILLE SUNDAY

Bennett Returned to Local Line-up and Pitched Great Ball.

Nine large zeros was the extent of the batting efforts of Knoxville at Tuscarora Field Sunday while Addison hit opportunely for five runs. The game was fast and well-played. Clarence Bennett returned to the firing line Sunday and pitched great ball. Not until the ninth inning did a Knoxville man connect with a clean hit, although they received credit for a scratch hit in the inning before. Addison was able to hit Costley when hits meant runs. For the first few innings, it was as pretty a pitchers' battle as could be staged, but Addison broke the ice in the fourth and was never headed. The Whitmore twins and Hewson and Grange played the local infield in fine style, while Laffkas pulled a nice running catch in right. George LaChance continued his fine catching. The whole Knoxville team played well. Bob Miller at third was their best bet.

Costley hit Hewson to start the fourth. Brennan dribbled one to Costley and was safe on the error. Mat Whitmore then came along with one of his old time wallops for three bases scoring Hewson and Brennan. In the seventh Laffkas and Grange co-laborated for a run with a couple of singles and a stolen base and in the eighth S. Whitmore's double, Hewson's single and outs at first by Brennan and M. Whitmore sent in Addison's last two counters.

RATTLERS

"A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush". But what if it is both in the bush and in the hand? And what if the bird is a six-foot rattlesnake? Harry Sanford may give us a new version of this time proven proverb.

While picking berries in his garden Mr. Sanford extended his hand into a promising looking bush. As he did so, a six-foot rattlesnake extended his entire body toward Mr. Sanford's hand. Mr. Sanford, not waiting to perform the usual formality of greeting, took unceremonious departure, leaving the visitor to rattle his perplexity at the unaccountable behavior of the human race.
